the role of institutions in governing the global economy so as to better manage the precarious-ness, the inequality, and the lack of engagement in multilateralism from which many countries are currently suffering. The precariousness of the global economy is currently underlined by the teetering crisis in

Governing the Global Economy: Strengthening Multilateral

The governance of the global economy has lagged behind globalization which has proceeded apace while the international institutions created to better manage international economic relations have become more ineffectual and marginalized. The World Trade Organization (WTO) is the forum for a round of negotiations (the Doha
